Spotlights reach for the Stars

Written by David on April, 5 2009

Our spotlights had a problem. They were too low, and as people walked in the main aisle of the balcony, their heads got in the way. What they needed was to reach of the stars, or the ceiling at least. Enter Bob S. He built very sturdy, removable platforms that fit the bill. Here is Bob sitting on his handywork. The platforms were first used at a concert on April 4, 2009. Here is Cody V. getting the whole beam on stage without any heads in the way.

Soon the platforms will have railings and a skirt. There are identical platforms on either side of the balcony. We had to do this first test to make sure everything was the right dimension. The new platforms are a great improvement for the Strand.
