Cobbler Gobblers

Written by Gary on February, 3 2011

Local musicians Kent and Marianne Lockman will bring their old time mountain and folk music back to the Strand Theatre as the Cobbler Gobblers. Their performance will start at 7:30 Friday, April 1st. Tickets in advance or at the door are $7. The ticket proceeds go to the Strand for their theatre upkeep and renovation.

Last October, the Lockmans and their partner of 23 years, Dee Capozzi of Whiteland performed for a Strand audience as Dishpan Pie. For this April fools? day concert, Dishpan Pie will be joined by friends, fiddler Joey Neal and banjoist Linda Cabe from the hills of North Carolina. As a group of five, they are known as the Cobbler Gobblers. The band performed a fall concert at the theatre two years ago to a large, appreciative audience.

Old fiddle tunes, folk, novelty, and kids songs will bring about lively, high-energy music on fiddles, banjos, guitar, and stand-up bass. The excellent Strand Theatre acoustics will enhance their close three-part harmony singing. The Gobblers also teach as they perform with anecdotes about mountain life and music.

The Cobbler Gobblers enjoy performing their historical mountain music and strive to create an evening of toe-tapping, down-home musical fun. If you didn't see them the first time they were here at the Strand, mark you calendar on April 1st and enjoy an evening in the mountains with Kent Lockman and his Cobbler Gobblers.
