The Mother of Invention

Written by David on July, 27 2012

Necessity played a part in the Strand's presentation of "Dream Big Magic" by Daniel Lusk. Our production staff arrived to find that our microphone lines to the edge of the stage were disconnected. No problem it is an easy fix. Ron Bush, the sound technician (and Strand Board Member) for the show went back stage to repatch the cables. He found that access to our sound equipment was blocked.

He tried to gain access from every direction but no luck. Necessity came into play. Fortunately we have a wireless body microphone that was at our sound board in the auditorium. We asked the performer to use his equipment and will a little fineness...viola! Back in business.

Sometimes we do what we have to do.
