Local Strand Artist to perform at FLOYDFEST

Written by David on February, 16 2013

FloydFest is a world music and arts festival held annually near Floyd, Virginia, situated in the Blue Ridge Mountains. It began in 2002 and has received excellent reviews ever since, earning a name for itself in 2005 when it played host to well-known folk singer Ani DiFranco. It lasts for four days with on-site camping and has over seven stages featuring Rock, Bluegrass, Reggae, Folk, Yiddish, Cajun, or Zydeco, African, World and Appalachian performers and showcases local Arts and Crafts, in addition to scheduling music and dance workshops and other small events, such as morning yoga lessons, story telling, and poetry readings, and a Children's Universe tent.

Local musician and Strand artist Carson Diersing we be performing at this year's event entitled: Rise & Shine. Carson is among a group of nationally known musicians that will perform. The publicity shot for Carson on the www.floydfest.com home event page is in front of our Strand Theatre during one of Carson's 2012 performances.

We send best wishes to Carson for being included in this prestigious event.
